

Tyler Vander Mooren

ITC413

March 31, 2026

Self-Reflective Team Communication Exercise

Work Style Table

Question	My Work Style	How to Respond to My Style
Example: What do your teammates need to know about your work habits?	I like to be organized, know the expectations early and then stay on track. I usually aim for strong quality work and try not to leave everything until the last second.	Be clear about deadlines, roles, and expectations early. Let me know if plans change so I can adjust.
What kind of work processes do you prefer?	I prefer splitting the project into smaller parts, assigning roles and checking in along the way. I like doing my part independently, then reviewing as a group.	Set clear tasks for each person and agree on a timeline. Use check-ins so nothing gets missed.
On which aspects of the project do you feel you could take the lead? What aspects would you prefer to support?	I can lead research, outlining, organizing, editing, and final review. I can also help with tech-related tasks. I prefer to support shared presentation work instead of doing everything alone.	Let me help structure the project and refine the final submission. Share the workload fairly across the group.
What are some ways you tend to communicate?	I am direct, straightforward and usually prefer written communication like text, email or chat. I like concise and clear updates.	Do not mistake directness for frustration. Keep communication clear, respectful and consistent.
What worries you about teamwork?	I worry most about uneven participation, weak communication or people waiting too long to do their part.	Check in regularly, be honest if you are falling behind and do not assume someone else will cover everything.
What information would help your teammates understand you better?	I care about doing well and making sure the project actually matches the instructions. I work best with people who communicate clearly and follow through.	Be upfront, reliable and respectful of time. A little planning goes a long way with me.
What are your biggest time restraints?	I currently work about 4 days a week, Sun/Mon, Wed, Fri. I'm off usually by	May not answer emails during work hours, so having agreed

	2pm and no later than 7pm PST but prefer to get work done in the morning and no later than 8:30pm.	check in times will work with me.
--	--	-----------------------------------